

PODCAST FLOW

HOST – Hover Kent Tizon

“Hello guys! Kamusta kayo? Sana okay kayo today — whether nasa bahay kayo, nasa school, nasa jeep, nagre-review, or nagpapahinga lang.

Welcome ulit sa podcast namin — The Bolton Celtics! I am your host for today. Ako si Hover.

So today... medyo iba yung vibe natin. Hindi siya super light topic na puro tawa lang. Pero hindi rin siya sobrang heavy na parang lecture. Sakto lang. Yung tipong habang nakikinig ka, mapapaisip ka talaga.

Ang topic natin is...

Why Failing is Actually Important.

Or pwede rin natin itanong — Why Losing is Winning?

Alam ko medyo contradicting pakinggan. Parang, ha? Anong klaseng mindset yan? Sino ba namang gustong matalo?

Like seriously — isipin mo.

May gumigising ba sa umaga na nagsasabing,

“Lord sana bumagsak ako today.”

“Sana matalo ako.”

“Sana mapahiya ako.”

Wala diba?

Failure is uncomfortable.

Failure is embarrassing.

Failure hurts.

Pag bumagsak ka sa quiz — anong first reaction mo?

Hindi mo naman iniisip, “Ah okay lesson learned.”

Ang una mong naiisip,

“Grabe nakakahiya.”

“Ano sasabihin nila?”

“Bakit ako?”

“Ang hina ko.”

Minsan nga hindi lang lungkot eh.

May kasamang hiya.

May comparison.
May pressure.
May self-doubt.

Yung tipong bigla mong ikukumpara sarili mo sa iba.

“Si ganito mataas.”
“Si ganito pumasa.”
“Ako hindi.”

And that feeling? Ang bigat.

Pero what if... kailangan talaga natin yun?
What if failure is not a sign na mahina ka — but a sign na nagta-try ka?

What if losing today is part of winning tomorrow?

So today, pag-uusapan natin yan. Hindi para i-glorify ang failure. Hindi para sabihing okay lang palagi magkamali. But to understand kung bakit siya parte ng process.

Xy... sa tingin mo, bakit ba takot na takot tayo mag-fail?”

CO-HOST – Xy

“Honestly? Pressure talaga.

Pressure from family.
Pressure from school.
Pressure from sarili natin.

Minsan hindi naman kailangan sabihin ng parents mo na “Dapat mataas grades mo.” Ramdam mo na yun eh. Ramdam mo yung expectation. Lalo na pag may comparison.

‘Buti pa si ganito.’
‘Honor student yan.’
‘Ikaw kaya mo rin yan.’

And hindi naman masama yung encouragement. Pero minsan nagiging pressure siya.

Tapos sa school, pag may bagsak ka, feeling mo ikaw lang yung ganun. Parang ikaw lang yung hindi naka-keep up. Kahit in reality, ang dami niyong pare-pareho ng struggle.

Pero hindi lang pinag-uusapan.

And dagdag mo pa social media.

Scroll ka lang ng scroll.

Dean's lister.

With honors.

Passed this.

Achieved that.

New milestone.

Parang lahat ng tao successful.

Pero hindi mo nakikita yung behind the scenes. Hindi mo nakikita yung failed exams nila. Yung breakdown moments nila. Yung doubts nila.

So pag ikaw nag-fail, feeling mo abnormal ka.

Parang ikaw lang yung may problema.

Kaya sobrang scary mag-fail.”

HOST (Deeper Follow-up)

“Grabe no. And minsan mas natatakot tayo hindi dahil sa failure mismo — kundi dahil sa sasabihin ng iba.

Like aminin natin, minsan mas masakit yung hiya kaysa sa actual na grade.

Parang, ‘Ano iisipin nila?’

And minsan tayo din yung harshest critic ng sarili natin.

Ako personally? Pag nagfa-fail ako, hindi ko muna iniisip kung ano yung lesson. Ang una kong naiisip — ‘Ang bobo ko ba?’

Automatic agad na sarili ko yung sinisisi ko.

Hindi ko muna iniisip na baka mali lang strategy ko. Or kulang sa preparation. Or pagod lang ako.

Self-doubt agad.”

OPPOSING VIEW – Francis Jerold Revadona (More Natural Debate)

Francis:

“Okay wait lang guys, medyo kontrabida muna ako dito ha.

Gets ko naman yung sinasabi niyo. Failure teaches lessons. Growth mindset. All that.

Pero real talk — hindi ba mas importante pa rin yung success?

Kasi in reality, results matter eh.

Like halimbawa, board exam. Pag bumagsak ka, hindi ka makakapag-practice. Hindi pwedeng sabihin mo lang, ‘Okay lang yan growth yan.’ May cost yun. Time, effort, money, pressure ulit.

Or halimbawa sa business — pag nalugi ka, hindi lang lesson yung mawawala. Pera talaga.

So siguro instead na sabihin nating important ang failure... mas importante siguro i-avoid siya as much as possible?

Hindi naman goal ang mag-fail diba? Goal pa rin natin manalo.”

HOST (natural reaction)

“Hmm. Valid.

Hindi naman talaga natin gustong mag-fail. Walang may dream na ‘Professional Failure.’

Xy?”

CO-HOST

“May point siya. Kasi oo nga, may consequences talaga.

Pero siguro ang tanong hindi kung gusto ba natin mag-fail.

Siguro ang tanong is — inevitable ba siya?”

HOST

“Oo. Kasi kahit anong prepare mo... may chance pa rin.

And siguro dun papasok yung difference ng intentional failure at accidental failure.

Kasi may failure na dahil tamad ka. May failure na dahil nag-risk ka.

Magkaiba yun.”

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE – Dashielle (Extended with interaction)

Dashielle:

“Share ko lang ah.

May time talaga na bumagsak ako sa subject na confident ako. As in confident.

Sabi ko pa sa tropa ko, ‘Easy lang to.’ Grabe yung confidence ko.

Tapos nung lumabas grades...

Parang nanlamig ako. Yung tipong tahimik ka nalang. Hindi ka makapagreact.

Tapos syempre may group chat. May nagtatanong, ‘Kamusta grades?’

Ako? Seen lang.

Ayoko magreply.

Hindi lang ako nalungkot. Parang na-question ko yung sarili ko.

‘Akala ko ba kaya ko to?’

Pero after ilang araw — kasi syempre may stage yan eh. Denial. Lungkot. Inis. Self-pity.

After nun, naisip ko — teka lang. Bakit nga ba?

Dun ko narealize na nagre-review ako... pero hindi ko talaga iniintindi. Parang basa lang ng basa. Walang application.

So nag-adjust ako. Nagpractice questions ako. Mas nagtanong ako.

And next exam? Hindi perfect. Pero sobrang layo sa dati.

Kung hindi ako bumagsak, hindi ko makikita yung mali ko.”

HOST (light humor)

“Grabe yung ‘seen lang.’ Universal move yan pag mababa grade.”

(Light laugh moment)

PSYCHOLOGY RESEARCHER – Denzel (Smart but Simple)

Denzel:

“Actually may explanation talaga yan.

May tinatawag na growth mindset. Pero simple lang siya.

Pag fixed mindset ka, pag nag-fail ka, iniisip mo agad, ‘Ganito na ako.’ Permanent na.

Pag growth mindset ka, iniisip mo, ‘Hindi pa ako magaling.’

Yung word na ‘pa’ sobrang powerful.

Kasi pag may ‘pa’, may possibility pa.

And based sa research, pag nagkakamali tayo, mas nagiging active yung brain sa learning. Kasi may discomfort. May signal na ‘Uy may mali.’

Failure forces us to reflect.

Pero ang problem, madalas hindi tayo umaabot sa reflection stage. Hanggang self-blame lang tayo.”

CO-HOST (relatable add-on)

“Totoo yan. Minsan hindi natin binibigyan ng chance yung sarili natin mag-analyze. Automatic, ‘Bagsak ako. Wala na.’”

SUCCESS CASE ANALYST – Klyth (Extended, grounded not preachy)

Klyth:

“Dagdag ko lang, halos lahat ng successful people may failure stories.

Athletes? Ang dami nilang talo bago maging champion.

Hindi naman sila agad magaling. May practice. May injury. May criticism.

Business owners? Hindi naman agad booming. May trial business. May losses.

Like owner ng SM — hindi naman agad mall empire yan. May risk. May wrong decisions din yan.

Even students na top ngayon — hindi mo alam ilang breakdown na dinaraan nila.

So parang success is not opposite ng failure.

Failure is part of the process.

Hindi siya side quest. Main storyline siya.”

PRACTICAL ADVICE – Sigmund (More conversational)

Sigmund:

“So paano natin haharapin yung failure without totally breaking?

Una, accept it. Huwag mong i-pretend na wala.

Pangalawa, mag cool-off ka muna. Hindi ka makakapagreflect pag fresh pa yung sakit.

Pangatlo, analyze objectively. Hindi ‘ang bobo ko.’ Ang tanong dapat, ‘Ano yung mali?’

Strategy? Time management? Distraction?

Pang-apat, adjust.

At pinaka-importante — try again.

Pero hindi yung same effort, same method. Try smarter.

Kasi failure only becomes permanent pag tumigil ka.

Hangga't may ginagawa ka, hindi ka pa tapos."

REFLECTION – Josh (Deep but simple, longer)

Josh:

"After hearing everything, parang ang clear sakín na failure is not the end.

Minsan kasi pag nagfa-fail tayo, feeling natin tapos na.

Pero hindi naman talaga.

Isang moment lang siya.

Isang result lang siya.

Hindi siya identity.

Failure is something that happened to you.

It's not who you are.

And honestly, mas scary para sakín yung never ka nag-fail.

Kasi ibig sabihin never ka nag-risk.

Never ka lumabas sa comfort zone.

Mas delikado yung stagnant ka.

Kasi pag stagnant ka, walang growth.

Failure hurts, yes.

Pero it builds humility. It builds empathy. It builds resilience.

And minsan, yung version mo after failure... mas mature. Mas grounded. Mas prepared."

HOST CLOSING (Extended naturally)

“Grabe no.

So siguro ang pinaka-takeaway natin is this:

Failure is painful, yes.

Failure has consequences, yes.

But failure also teaches, strengthens, and prepares us.

Hindi siya goal.

Pero hindi rin siya kalaban.

Parte siya ng proseso.

So next time na mag-fail tayo, instead na sabihin nating ‘Wala na,’ maybe sabihin natin ‘Okay... anong lesson dito?’

Instead na ‘Talo ako,’ sabihin natin ‘Natuto ako.’

And maybe... just maybe...

Failing is not falling behind.

It’s part of moving forward.

Thank you guys for listening sa podcast namin — The Bolton Celtics.

See you next time.”

Reflection:

The conceptualization behind the meeting for this laboratory activity stemmed from the idea that we wanted each member can relate to the topic of the meeting. Since each of us has experienced being at rock bottom one way or another, we figured we wanted our meeting to discuss "Why Losing is Actually Winning." Moreover, nowadays, a podcast is a good platform to voice out our opinions and share our perspective on things, hence we decided to make a podcast using the mentioned topic. However, it was not a smooth sailing journey, we encountered technical difficulties during the actual podcast such as with the recording process and clarity of audio during the meeting. Even though it took 30 mins for the technical difficulties to be resolved, we were able to record nicely. Lastly, as a group, our main takeaway on online collaboration was that cooperation is key. Cooperation includes stating your opinion for the betterment of the group, and being able to listen with objectivity to each member's suggestions. The contribution of each member is vital to any collaboration be it online or offline. This activity emphasized that importance since collaboration would be applicable once we join companies and industries.